Oct 15: Caravan of Thieves (United States)

www.NewBandDaily.com

Folky, guitar strumming, violin jamming, and with a Jason Mraz-esque lead singer accompanied by a beautiful harmonically pleasing female voice. Caravan of Thieves' music is pleasantly plump.

Add a sense of humor, as in their song "Ghost Writer" where they croon, "Oh Ghost Writer, I'm nothing without you..." and you've got quite an intriguing four-some.

The sweet duets are sung by husband and wife, accompanied by their killer violinist and impressive double bass player, all identifying themselves as a new brand of gypsy music, with a twist of swing.

This is music the whole family could appreciate. And with an album titled Bouquet, this assortment of songs and styles come together like a beautiful arrangement to make anyone's day better!

Songs we recommend you listen to: "Ghost Writer" and "The Butcher's Wife."
