

caravan of Thieves

"Funhouse"

Caravan of Thieves are exactly what Rasputina wants to be if only the later could drop the pretentious attitude.

Thieves are fun, quirky and original without that pungent smell of self-importance that wafts off Rasputina or the more reprehensible Amanda Palmer.

All strings, with a percussion section that consists of whatever is within reach, Thieves' "Funhouse" is that fun.

It is different, yet melodic with hints of The Mamas and Papas harmonies. Unconventional, but they know it and play to its best.

With imagination and sense of whimsy, Thieves achieve originality in an all-too-bland sonic landscape. They, at times, invoke images of the Soggy-Bottom Boys, but with a darker wit befitting their real point of origin, that being gypsy folk.

Link

http://www.theswervemagazine.com/2012_music_reviews_2.html